INDIAN HISTORY

The Indians played a very important part in the early history of the town of Freeport. The physical advantages of the location, their burial place on Lane's Island, and the importance of the place to them from its situation in relation to other towns, lead the Indians to resist the advance of the whites with a hostility more indomitable and deadly than they exhibited towards most other settlements in the state. Owing to this, the lands in the interior continued to be laid waste and the inhabitants, though living near together, were often obliged to forsake their dwellings. Husbands and fathers were killed and wives and children were carried into captivity. Compelled to carry arms in their walks, their labors and their worship, the inhabitants said: "There is no peace to him that goeth out nor to him that cometh in. We get our bread at the peril of our lives because of the sword of the wilderness." Mr. William Scales, father of Deacon Thomas Scales and Matthew Scales was killed in the year 1725 on the Scales farm, and soon after Joseph Felt, father of Mrs. Peter Weare, was killed at Broad Cove. Felt's wife and children were carried into captivity and afterwards redeemed by Capt. Weare. Joseph Weare, a grandson of Felt, never lost an opportunity to be revenged on the Indians. Several stories told concerning him, the truth of which the writer would not vouch for, are quoted from "Old Times." Weare once lived near the bank of the Androscoggin river at Lewiston Falls. In some way he learned that a war party had planned to descend the river one dark night and attack the settlers in that vicinity. In order to prevent getting too near the falls in the darkness, they sent one of their number down the river to build a fire on the island some way above the falls. After nightfall, Weare surprised and killed the sentinel, extinguished the fire, and built another on the island just at the head of the falls, now known locally as Island Garden. The Indians, feeling secure as long as they were above the beacon light, were caught in the rapids before they realized their danger and were carried over the falls to death. On another occasion Weare was splitting rails near his home when six Indians approached him and asked if he could tell them where Joe Weare lived, to which question the quick-witted old scout replied in the affirmative and offered to show them the person they sought as soon as he had finished splitting the log on which he was then at work. When "Joe" had driven in his wedge and had the log well opened he asked the Indians to help him by pulling on each side as he drove the wedge; to this the party agreed and took hold, three on each side, with their fingers in the crack of the log, when Weare, by a dextrous blow of the sledge, knocked out the wedge causing the seam to close like a vice upon their hands and leaving them at the mercy of their terrible enemy, who as he gave each a death blow with his axe shouted in the ears of his victims: "I'm Joe Weare, d—— you, I'm Joe Weare."

The hostility of Weare towards the Indians was never abated. He swore to kill one for every drop of blood they drew from the veins of his brother-in-law.

Philip Greely, ancestor of the Greely family of this section, and of Portland, was killed Aug. 9, 1746, at the lower Falls, in Yarmouth, near the house of the late Mr. Daniel True, when a company of thirty two Indians had secreted themselves intending to surprise Weare's garrison when the men should have gone to work. They were discovered by Mr. Greely's dog, else they had probably suffered him to pass unmolested. Though Mr. Greely lost his life, this probably saved the garrison.

It was in a skirmish with the savages that Walter Gendall, one of the bravest and foremost men of the early days, was slain by a shot through the body. Separated from his men by the river he suddenly noticed that they ceased firing, and by their signal he knew that their ammunition was exhausted and that they were at the mercy of the savages. Against the entreaties of his wife and family he determined to risk the chance of death, by crossing the open river to save his men. He managed to get safely by the middle of the stream, but as the boat touched shore he received a bullet in the body and immediately expired, having only time to throw the ammunition ashore and say: "I have lost my life in your service." The party were now enabled to maintain their ground till night came on when the Indians retreated.

On Saturday, May 4th, 1756, a large party of Indians appeared at Topsham, where they separated, one party to go to New Meadows, and the other to North Yarmouth. The latter party, at day-break, on Sabbath morning, attacked the house of Mr. Thomas Maines, at Flying Point, now Freeport, which, though well fortified, they finally entered. John Martin was in the chamber of the house with a loaded gun, but not being able in the darkness to find it, kept himself concealed. Mr. Maines, his wife and children, and a sister of Mrs. Maines, Miss Skinner by name, were dragged from the house, and Mr. Maines shot near by; meanwhile, Mrs. Maines and the children succeeded in regaining the house and fastening the door. A ball from the gun of an Indian entered the house and was fatal to an infant in the arms of Mrs. Maines, also wounding the mother. At length the Indians again entered the dwelling, but Martin, pointing his gun which he had found, through the chamber floor, dropped one of them in the entry; retaining the sister of Mrs. Maines and bearing away their wounded man, they hastily departed.

A Mr. Bryant was killed near Cousin River, and two others near by. Edward Brewer, a Connecticut sailor living on Wolf's Neck, and Ambrose Talbot, Henry Parker, and Stephen Wesson, who were all settled near South Freeport, were driven from their homes by the Indians. Three times the woods were fired, forcing them to begin anew.

These are only a few typical illustrations of the warfare that was continually raging.

To summarize the Indian wars which bore directly on the history of Freeport: In 1675 the Indians began a war of extermination, and the settlers were obliged to abandon their homes which were pillaged and burned. After three years, peace was made and the inhabitants returned to their desolate homes.

In 1688 there was another outbreak. The saw mills were burned and many inhabitants butchered. Forced to abandon their homes the second time, the few surviving settlers removed to Jewell's Island and built a fort there to protect themselves until they could return to Massachusetts.

Soon after the breaking out of the war between France and England in 1744, hostilities were resumed, and for several years the savages sought the destruction of the English settlers.

The old redoubt on Prince's Point behind which is a grass covered lawn succeeded by a beautiful grove, was the annual resort of the Indians in the early days. The high bank to the left of the redoubt is for many rods composed of shells intermixed with soil which is the accumulation of these annual feasts. To the right the falling bank occasionally discloses an Indian skeleton showing this bank to have been to them the place of burial for their dead, and the feasts were probably held to the departed warriors.

EARLY SETTLEMENTS

The ancient settlement of Wescustogo, which was incorporated a town in 1680, by the name of North Yarmouth, then included the present town of Freeport, but we shall attempt in this brief account to give only the names of the men who settled within our present limits, or those whose action bore directly upon the development of this town.

The early voyagers reported fish, game and wild fruits in great abundance within the waters and upon the hillsides bordering the coast of the Harriseeket river, but the difficulty of escape from Indian incursions prevented any permanent settlement on the main land for many years. A few had located on the islands in the bay. In 1658 James Lane ventured a short distance up Cousin River, and located on its east bank in what has become Southwest Freeport. He soon afterwards received a grant of the land on which he had settled, and also of the island which bears his name at the mouth of the river. About 1660 John Mosier settled on Mosier's, since changed to Moge's Island. Richard Dummer occupied Pine, since changed to Flying Point, until his death in 1666. Richard Bray settled a short distance south of Mr. Lane. Nathaniel Wallis bought his improvement and claim of 55 acres of land in 1672. Mr. Lane's land was deeded in 1673. Wolf's Neck was held and occupied by John Shepherd in 1666. Amos Stevens, son-in-law of Wm. Royall, joined him in 1674. Bustin's Island was occupied by Wm.

Haynes, previous to the Indian war of 1676. At the commencement of hostilities James Lane was killed. His four sons, John, Henry, Samuel and Job, fled with the alarmed settlers, who escaped with their lives, but all lost their homes.

When peace was again restored most of these returned, with others. Thomas Blashford settled on the west shore of Harriseeket River in 1681, John Harris in 1682, Vines Elliott and John York in 1682-84. William Larrabee, east of Cousin River, in 1685. The "waste land" between Mr. Warton, who claimed three miles to the westward of Burgomungomug River, and B. Gedney, who claimed two miles eastward from Cousin River, was granted to J. Dummer, Simeon Stoddard, John Foster, and Walter Gendall in 1686. Pine (Flying) Point was granted to Jeremiah Dummer, one of the proprietors' committee, in 1684.

Thomas Bailey, one of the proprietors' trustees in 1685, was a son of John Bailey who came over in the "Mayflower," and ancestor of four John Baileys in a direct line, the last of whom was father of Seth Bailey, Sr., and grandfather of Amos J., Asa, and Seth Bailey, Jr., of this town. Josiah Atwood settled near Cousin River, and sold his place to Thomas Reding in 1690.

July 27, 1688, an Indian and his squaw came to the house of Samuel and Henry Lane, and were permitted to stay all night. The next morning they went to the water's edge and called five other Indians. They asked for coals with which they began building a fire near the house. Telling them of the danger of setting fire to the house, the Lanes carried the fire to the edge of the water for them, whereupon they fell upon Samuel Lane, who defended himself so valiantly that they left him and began chasing his hogs with their hatchets. Soon after this there was a general outbreak, and the settlers were forced to abandon their claims. John Shepherd was killed. Henry Wolfe, who married Shepherd's daughter in England, came to America, and settled upon his claim in 1717. He received a grant of 67 acres of land upon Wolfe's Neck and Wolfe's Island in 1733 and in 1735 was one of the fifteen voters of the town of North Yarmouth. His daughter Mary was the maternal ancestor of Nathaniel Aldrich, grandfather of Hon. George Aldrich.

Mr. Wolfe planted the first orchard in the town, but finding it attractive to the Indians, who came for the apples, he cut it all down but one extremely sour tree.

After the settlers began to return, in 1722, there became quite a settlement along the Harriseeket River and on Flying Point. James Anderson settled on the Point. Greenfield Pote, Gideon Mann, and Abner Dennison settled near the Cove burying ground, and east of the river.

Mr. Boardman came previous to the survey of 1726. Other settlers joined them, and a block house of hewn logs was built for their mutual protection. Joseph Anderson was born here in 1742. Mr. Babble lived on Flying point in 1746. Thomas Means, who was killed in 1756 by the Indians as shown in the preceding chapter, was one of the early arrivals after the re-settlement began. Edward Brewer, a Connecticut sailor, was one of the early settlers on Wolfe's Neck. Ambrose Talbot came up the river in a canoe and made a settlement at South Freeport, just west of the village. He was joined by Henry Parker next to the creek westward. Steven Weston settled near. Jonathan Rice and Phineas Stevens, who came as chairmen, settled in the town. James Jameson came in 1758.

Amos Sylvester settled on Prout's Gore in 1759, where his son Thomas was born the following year. James Sawyer, Seabury Winslow, Melzor Byram, and Jonathan Woodbury also came in 1759 and settled east of the landing. Caleb Sylvester came in 1763, and Joshua and Abraham Mitchell in 1768. Wm. Todd settled near "Todd's Bridge" in 1771. Moses Cobb, Ezra Curtis, Capt. Thomas Curtis, Thomas Coffin, Job Douglass, Samuel Griffin, Richard Grant, Richard Kilby, Asa Miller, Daniel Pratt, and Josiah Stockbridge, were all residents here before 1774.

Nathaniel Josselyn, a soldier of the Revolution, settled here, with his brother Abner, at the close of the war. William, Joseph, and Nehemiah Ward were also early settlers. Nehemiah Ward was a tithing man in North Yarmouth in 1753.

The following is a list, dated March 7, 1774, of those living at Flying Point who objected against being set off as a separate Parish.

George Rogers, James Jameson, Thomas Campbell. Robert Pickeman, John Day, Edward Bruter, Enoch Dill. Joseph Anderson, Jacob Anderson, Benj. Chase, John Hewey, Silas Wentworth, John Mann, Richard Goodins, Daniel Cruer, Thos. Cobb, Gideon Mann, James Anderson.

March 1, 1782. The following, dwelling "near and upon Flying Point Road, so called," considered its location as "inconvenient and expensive to maintain; and pray that it may be shut up, and that the Range way may be effectually opened in lieu thereof." Joseph Davis, Abner Dennison, Jr., Nehemiah Randall, Thos. Curtis, Jr., Ichabod Frost, Job Bennett, Mark Rogers, Edward Hooper, Moses Merrill, Jacob White, James Soule, David Cooper, Lemuel Farrow, Abner Dennison, Edmund Chapman, Phineas Frost, Thomas Curtis, Benj. Rackley, Ichabod Soule, Wm. Mitchell, Jedediah Soul, Samuel Griffin.

The following, "dwelling on the eastern side of Harriseeket River." petitioned, Feb. 7, 1785, for a road "from the town line to the Mast Landing."

Thos. Bicknell, Richard Grant, Noah Pratt, Eliab Gurney, Benj. Curtis, Job Bennett, Jonathan Woodman, Wm. Atkinson, Joseph Davis, Gideon Lane.

These names we give, as they show who were then living in those different parts of the town, shortly before the incorporation of the town, and as we see, before the permanent highways were established.

INCORPORATION

The town of Freeport was formed from the town of North Yarmouth, being set off and incorporated in 1789. There was also included in the town, by the act of Incorporation "a Tract of Land called Prout's Gore," lying between North Yarmouth and Brunswick. The act of Incorporation passed the Massachusetts House of Representatives Feb. 13, 1789, and the Senate the following day. It bears the bold signature of John Hancock, then Governor of Massachusetts and the first man to sign the Declaration of American Independence.

This town originally extended to the New Gloucester line. That part north of lots 13, 12, 22, 23, 20, 21, 18, 19, 16 and 17, in ranges A, B, C, D and E, was taken off to form Pownal in 1808. The town is now bounded on the east by Brunswick, on the south by Casco Bay, on the west by Cousin River and Yarmouth, following the line between the 100 and 120-acre divisions, and on the north by Pownal and Durham. It includes all islands formerly belonging to North Yarmouth and Prout's Gore lying northeast of a line extending east-southeast from Lane's Point, which are not intersected thereby. The town was to pay its share of the Revolutionary war debt, pay 2-5ths of all assessed taxes, and receive its share of the town military stores on hand.

FIRST TOWN MEETING

Under a warrant issued by Samuel Merrill, Esq., an election was held March 23, 1789, at the meeting house which stood in the old burying ground. Samuel Merrill was elected moderator, and Nathan Wesson, town clerk. Rev. Abraham Cummings then opened the meeting by prayer. John Mann was chosen treasurer, and Joseph Staple, James Curtis and Col. George Rogers, selectmen and assessors. The following were also chosen, whom we give as they show who were the town leaders at the time the town was formed: Cornelious Soule, George Bartoll, collectors and constables; William Todd, constable; Bartholomew Reed, John Dunning, wardens; Jeremiah Nason, Samuel Winslow, Josiah Cummings, William Brown, Samuel Griffin, Abner Sylvester, Mark Rogers, Daniel Curtis, Robert Anderson, surveyors of highways; Ezra Curtis, Ambrose Talbot, tithing-men; James Buxton, culler of hoops and staves; Seward Porter, Thomas Meins, surveyors of boards; James Crocker, Ambrose Talbot, Joseph Mitchell, fence viewers; Abraham Reed, Calvin Carver, Benj. Parker, Jr., James Soule, Silas Wentworth, Noah Pratt, hog-reves and field-drivers; and Thomas Bicknell, sealer of leather. At a meeting held May 4, following, William Brown was chosen selectman in place of Col. George Rogers. It was then agreed that the collection of taxes be at the rate of "8 pence on the pound." 60 pounds was raised for schools, and one-half that sum for the support of preaching. This was left in the care of Daniel Dennison, Amos Sylvester and George Bartoll, who were chosen a committee on ministerial and school lands. Rev. Alfred

Johnson was voted a call to the ministry of the church, in the following September, with a salary of £90 and £180 settlement, with a substantial increase from time to time.

Pounds were also necessary during these early days when there were few fences. If we are to judge the number and strength of their cattle by the pound which they erected this month on the ministerial lot we would say that these pioneer clearings were well stocked. The pound was 40 feet square and seven feet high, built of round timber.

On March 3, by an act of the Massachusetts Legislature, the northwestern half of Freeport was set off and incorporated a separate town under the name of Pownal.

The first town hall in Freeport was erected over the store of Mr. Samuel Holbrook, in 1831-33. Previous to this the meetings had been held generally in the old meeting house. This town house was burned in 1845.

TOWN OFFICIALS

The following men have filled the offices of clerk, treasurer and selectmen since the incorporation of the town. These names are among the leading men of the town, and almost without exception, have served the community impartially and satisfactorily, and with credit to their ability as public servants.

MILITARY MATTERS

During the Revolution this town formed a part of the town of North Yarmouth, hence her military history of that period is necessarily the history of that town. We give below a list of the men, citizens of Harraseeket at the time of the war, or men who afterwards settled in that part of the town which forms the present town of Freeport.

SOLDIERS OF THE REVOLUTION

John Maxwell, Nathaniel Josselyn, Jonathan Byram, Robert Townsend, Melzor Byram, Richard Gookins, Nathaniel Aldrich, Samuel Litchfield.

In 1798, there were three companies of militia equipped, as the law directed, and supplied with $200 worth of ammunition. The town rendered efficient service in the war of 1812, both on land and water. A privateer, named "The Dash," was built on Harraseeket River, and manned by a picked crew of sixteen young men of Freeport. Capt. George Bacon had recently, with the assistance of one man, rescued a prize in which he was a prisoner, and been injured in an escape from recapture,—and the command devolved upon John Porter. The "Dash" was spoken by the "Champlain" when steering for Georges Banks—and was never heard from after.

Capt. Porter's brother, John Bennett and Dennis Sylvester, were lost on the vessel. Fifteen muskets, with necessary ammunition, were purchased by the town, as a precautionary measure, in 1814.

SOLDIERS OF THE WAR OF 1812

CIVIL WAR

The prominent part taken by the men of this town in the War of the Rebellion is a source of just pride to its citizens of today. These men were found among the foremost in the battles which won for this country an undivided union, and for an enslaved race, freedom from the bondage of past centuries and the liberty of American citizenship.

Many were the brave fellows who fell on the field of battle, and many were the noble deeds done by the Boys in Blue who had, in these humble homes, learned to face the dangers of life, that their duties of life might be well performed.

The following is a list of the men who enlisted from this town. Most of these saw active service, and, as the list of mortalities given later will show, many of them gave their lives in their country's service.

INDUSTRIAL ACCOUNT

The earliest industry of the settlers in this town was fishing. The sheltered harbor, or free-port, which gave the town its name, offered unusual advantages, and the present location of South Freeport became a center for this trade. This business assumed its greatest importance from 1825 to 1830, when as many as 12,000 barrels of mackerel were packed upon its wharf in a single year.

The fisheries were again revived by Alfred Soule and Samuel Bliss, who opened a store at South Freeport, and packed largely. William K. Lewis & Bro. erected a general packing establishment at this place in 1876, and operated it for several years. This was located on the site of the present clam factory.

Soon the attention of this sea-going people was turned to shipbuilding. This was a leading industry for several decades. There were two shipyards located at South Freeport. These were operated by Enos Soule, and Soule & Bliss and by Capt. Enoch Talbot. In 1877 the building firm was changed to Soule Bros. The yard half a mile above was established in 1853, and operated by Cushing & Means—afterwards by Briggs & Cushing. Edwin Merrill and Master Rufus Soule were early shipbuilders at Porter's Landing. Enos Soule alone built 87 vessels. In 1854, nine vessels were launched upon the Harraseeket River. The last ship, the "Wilna," of 1,483 tons, was built in 1880 by Briggs & Cushing. The "John A. Briggs," launched in 1878, was the largest wooden ship built on the Maine coast up to that time.

In 1824, when Samuel Bliss opened the old tavern, which is now standing on the south side of Postoffice Square, the village of Freeport was a lively lumbering center. The village was then surrounded by woods which for some time furnished considerable wealth to the inhabitants.

J. P. Merrill's machine shop was established in 1870, making that, perhaps, the oldest established concern in the town today.

The manufacture of clothing was carried on quite extensively from 1860 to 1875. This gave employment to many hands. Those engaged in this business were: C. C. Luce, D. P. Ring, E. T. Townsend and Isaac Parker.

There are not many natural water privileges in the town of Freeport. A Mr. Dennison had a mill located at Mast Landing near the head of tide in 1804, and afterwards a large flouring, saw, shingle, and general wood-working mill. This was burned in 1861, and the site abandoned. On the west branch was an early tide mill.

SHOE MANUFACTORY

The H. E. Davis Company was the first concern established in town for the manufacture of shoes. This was opened in 1873 by Davis Brothers, at which time the capacity of the plant was several hundred cases a year. Practically all the work was then done by hand, machinery not being generally used for the business. The original business was located about two miles out of the village, and was there operated for nine years, until it outgrew its quarters. In 1882 the business was moved to more commodious quarters on Mechanic Street. There it was operated for sixteen years at the end of which time the business was removed to the present large plant near the railroad station. This factory now turns out a yearly product of about twenty-five hundred cases of ladies' shoes.

The buildings have a floor space of 40,000 square feet. The factory is run by steam power, and lighted by electricity. The plant is thoroughly equipped with the latest and best machinery.

The business was incorporated in 1902, and the company organized, with H. E. Davis as president; J. F. Davis, treasurer; G. A. Davis, clerk; and H. E. Davis, J. F. Davis, G. A. Davis, A. H. Berry, B. F. Davis, directors.

The company gives employment to 85 hands. Their sales average from 4,000 to 5,000 pairs of ladies' shoes per week. Their trade extends to different parts of the country and is steadily increasing.

The manufacturing interests of this town were greatly augmented in 1886 when Edmund P. Mallet, Jr., began his active industrial career of which we shall speak later. He erected the fine shoe manufacturing plant now owned and operated by A. W. Shaw & Co. When this concern was founded in 1887, the daily product was about nineteen dozen and eight pairs of men's shoes. Today the manufactory has a floor space of 47,620 square feet, gives employment to 326 hands, and disburses in wages an average of $3000 a week.

This manufactory is run by steam power. The company maintain their own electric plant from which the buildings are lighted, it requiring nearly 800 lights for this purpose.

From one end of the factory to the other is a distance of 400 feet. The buildings are so constructed as to form the letter u, in the center of which is a large, solid trestle 90 feet high, upon which is a huge water tank for use in case of fire.

Besides doing a manufacturing business of more than ten times the original capacity of the concern, the company own over twenty acres of land which embraces other kinds of business in Freeport, including houses, stores and the saw mill.

The company have an office at 28 Lincoln street, Boston. This shoe manufactory is the largest and best equipped to be found in New England. The office at Freeport is in a brick building, separated from the factory.

Other concerns which have opened shops in town for the manufacture of shoes have been J. M. V. Jordan, who established a plant in the northern part of the town in 1874. This shop did a large business for several years.

L. M. Bailey, who established a shop at the village in 1877; and Harlan P. Dennison, a year later.

There were also others who have carried on this business to a small extent.

The shoe industries are now the principal manufacturing establishments in town, but several others were introduced by Mr. Mallet during the last twenty years.

The grist mill was built by him in 1886, together with the engine house which stands beside it. The grist mill is now run by J. C. Clark, who purchased the property six years ago of Edward Hyde. This is probably one of the busiest grist mills within a large area as it has the entire patronage of the surrounding section.

The saw mill, located near Shaw's shoe shop, and owned by that company, was constructed by Mr. Mallet in 1887. For a few years it was operated under the name of the Freeport Lumber and Box Co. It is now operated by E. F. Libby who employs nine men about the plant. The Product of the mill is box-boards and long and short lumber.

Other industries which were established and operated by Mr. Mallet, were the granite quarries at Wolf's Neck, granite and marble manufactories, brick yard, wood and coal yard and house construction. He erected over twenty-five of Freeport's neat and comfortable residences, and a business block located on Main street.

The quarries are located on Wolf's Neck, and produce a very superior grade of granite. Beautiful statues and monuments that were made here from blocks from this quarry are located in many of the burying grounds throughout

New England and the Central West. The quarries are not now operated, having passed through the hands of several owners. It is hoped that this industry which offers unusual advantages here, will soon be resumed. The village is now a busy manufacturing and trading center and is well situated as a commercial center.

CHURCH ACCOUNT

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

The Town of Freeport, including a tract of land called Prout's Gore and the north-easterly part of North Yarmouth, was, on the 14th of Feb'y, 1789, constituted a distinct parish, by an act of the Legislature of Massachusetts, and Dec. 21st of the same year, the First Congregational Church was organized within the parish. Those members of the First Congregational Church of North Yarmouth, who lived within the newly formed parish, together with others, made up the original membership. The Rev. Alfred Johnson was invited to become the first pastor. He was installed by council, Dec. 29, 1789, and continued to serve the church acceptably and faithfully for about sixteen years. During his ministry seventy-one were received into church fellowship. In 1805 he received a call from the church in Belfast, Me., which he felt it his duty to accept, and Sept. 11, 1805 he was dismissed from his pastorate in Freeport.

The next minister to serve this people was the Rev. Samuel Veazie, who was installed Dec. 10, 1806. In less than two years after his settlement his health began to fail, and Feb'y 5, 1809, he passed from the church militant to the church triumphant.

Rev. Joazaniah Crosby supplied the pulpit a few months after Mr. Veazie's death, but did not see fit to accept a call to the pastorate. A call was extended to Rev. Reuben Nason, who was installed Feb'y 6, 1810.

He was succeeded by Rev. Enos Merrill, who was installed as pastor Nov. 6, 1816, and continued to serve in that relation until Jan. 6, 1830. During his pastorate, the old meeting house, said to have been built in 1774, and located on Yarmouth Street near the old burying ground, was taken down, with the intention of rebuilding on the same spot. But after considerable discussion it was wisely decided to build nearer the center of the village; and in May, 1818, the frame of a new house was raised on the foundation on which the present church building stands. When this building was almost finished, it was destroyed by fire. Though much discouraged over the loss, the parish again proceeded to build, and in Sept. of the same year the frame of a second house was raised upon the same foundation. The work was vigorously pushed forward, and on Feb'y 25, 1819, the new building was completed and publicly dedicated to the worship of God.

Rev. Mr. Merrill was succeeded by Rev. Seneca White, who supplied the pulpit in 1831. He was followed by Rev.

Cephas H. Kent, who was installed as pastor July 25, 1832, and served in that relation until Sept. 26, 1836.

At the annual business meeting in Jan., 1829, the subject of temperance was introduced and the question was asked all, who were present, whether they adopted the principle of total abstinence. The question was generally answered in the affirmative. Again in 1833, the question was taken up and the use of strong drink condemned most severely. For that age this was most advanced and radical ground to take on the temperance question.

The next minister to serve the church was Rev. Ebenezer G. Parsons. He came from Bangor Seminary to this, as his first charge, and was ordained by council, Oct. 4, 1837. The first year of his pastorate, fifty-six members were added to the church. And during his pastorate of fourteen years, one hundred and fifty were received into covenant relation. The annual report of 1840 indicates a total membership of 225, the largest reported at any one time in the history of the church. He closed his labors with this people Aug. 13, 1851.

In December of the same year, Rev. Luther Conklin became pastor. He was a most faithful and devoted minister and was greatly beloved by his people. He was dismissed Mar. 8, 1858.

He was followed by Rev. R. S. Kendall, who supplied the pulpit one year. Rev. E. S. Palmer next served the church as pastor, from June 4, 1861, until Feb'y 11, 1863; and Benjamin F. Sanborn as acting pastor from 1865 until 1870.

During the summer and fall of 1867, quite extensive repairs were made on the meeting house. The galleries along the sides were taken down and many other changes made. After being closed for nearly eight months, it was rededicated Jan. 1, 1868.

Rev. J. J. Bulfinch was installed Oct. 18, 1870. He continued until Apr. 4, 1876, when he was dismissed by a mutual council. He was followed by Rev. George Michael who served the church two years.

Rev. P. B. Wing, of Bangor Seminary, supplied the pulpit for ten months, and was then installed pastor Jan. 28, 1880. He continued a little over seven years and was very successful.

Those who have served this church since 1887 are: Rev. Chas. W. Longren, Aug. 24, 1887 to Sept. 1, 1889; Rev. W. F. Stone, 1890-91; Rev. Edwin C. Brown, 1892-99; Rev. A. C. Furbush, 1900-3; and Silas M. Adams, who came in 1903 and is now serving.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

The origin of this church must be attributed to the Holy Spirit accompanying the preaching of the Gospel. After the settlement of the town, Baptist ministers occasionally visited the place and preached. During the year 1807 there was a religious awakening under Rev. Thomas Paul of Boston, a colored preacher. Several were converted. The first baptism took place Oct. 8th, 1807. The candidates were Sarah Dunham and Betty Wesson. Dr. Green of North Yarmouth officiated.

On Nov. 20th, 1807, a church of seventeen members was organized in the house of Nathan Wesson. The church was born in a revival which continued for upwards of a year.

Between Oct. 8th, 1807, and Nov. 20th, 1808, forty-five were baptised. Baptist services have been held in this town since Oct. 11th, 1807.

Rev. Silas Stearns was the first pastor. On Nov. 24th, 1807, after a day of prayer, brethren Nathan Wesson and Edmund Pratt were chosen deacons.

In the latter part of 1828, during the ministry of Enoch Freeman, a marked revival occurred which spread to all parts of the town, reaching all classes of people. In the early part of the year 1839 the record says that the condition of the church was truly deplorable. Rev. John Butler accepted the hearty invitation of the church to labor with them for a few weeks. In three months there were sixty baptisms. Following this work was the pastorate of Dr. E. H. Gray.

During the year 1883, under the labors of an evangelist, and the hearty and faithful work of Pastor, A. C. Herrick, a notable revival occurred. On June 3rd, 1883, fifty obeyed their Lord in the ordinance of baptism. In the revival of this year the pastor of the Congregational Church cordially co-operated.

The first meeting-house suited to the needs of the people was erected in 1808. It was joyfully dedicated to the service of God. This was repaired or remodeled from time to time. It was occupied for eighty-eight years. In 1896 it was removed and the present house erected, which was dedicated Oct. 14th, 1897. The site of these churches is an elevated spot toward the upper end of Main Street. Through the kindness and generosity of the heirs of the late Capt. Koopman an addition has been made to the old lot in the rear. The church now occupies a commodious and well built house of worship. May the blessing of God as richly rest upon the new temple as it did upon the old one. "Except the Lord build the house they labor in vain that build."—From the Souvenir Booklet, 1901.

FREE BAPTIST CHURCH

The Free Will Baptist Church at Wardtown, or North Freeport, was organized June 28, 1842, under the name of the Freeport and Brunswick Church. It was organized by Elders Nathaniel Purrington, E. G. Eaton, and Ira Ridlon. The meeting house was dedicated Jan. 13, 1843, and the parish was organized the same year.

Rev. Ephraim Purrington preached here for several years. Other old-school preachers were Rev. Nathaniel Bard, Joseph Hutchinson, Almon Libby and A. B. Sherwood. Rev. John W. Lowden, a Bates College student, preached here much of the time while in college. The church was remodeled during his pastorate. Other preachers were Reverends A. S. Prescott, J. E. Prescott and Rev. Mr. Roberts. This church has been supplied by the pastors of surrounding churches much of the time. Services are now held only during the summer months. Rev. Mr. Douglass is now officiating.

SOUTH FREEPORT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

In the year 1855, twenty persons living in the locality of South Freeport, united in a society, calling it "The Freeport South Church Society." They at once erected a house of worship, which was dedicated August 14, 1856. This structure was located nearly on the site of the present vestry. The church was regularly organized July 9, 1857, with eighteen members. Rev. John S. C. Abbott, the well-known Maine historian was the first pastor of this church. Rev. Mr. Abbott was a professor at Bowdoin College while preaching here, and the remarkable success which followed his labor in the church, well shows his power, and his devotion to his work. Under his care, the church was greatly strengthened as a result of an extensive revival. Mr. Abbott was, together with a brother, the author of many historical works which were very popular, and extensively read by the reading public of twenty-five years ago. The following is a complete list of all who have been regular pastors of this church, with the dates of their arrival and dismissal.

Reverends John S. C. Abbott, 1857--59; Amory H. Tyler, 1859--62; Cyril Pearl, 1862--65; Horatio Ilsley, Apr. 19, 1868--Apr. 18, 1876; David L. Jones, Apr. 23, 1876--Apr. 21, 1878; C. G. Burnham, Oct. 10, 1880--Oct. 6, 1885; C. G. Nichols, Oct. 28, 1886--Nov. 12, 1888; Arthur Smith, Nov. 17, 1889--Oct. 16, 1898; Geo. H. Woodward, Mar. 1, 1899--to date.

The original church was destroyed by fire in March 1884. The present modern edifice was erected during the summer following and dedicated, free from debt, in November. The first vestry, located on Main street, became outgrown, when the new one was constructed on the church lot. The present membership of the church is 80. It is the only church at South Freeport, and is in a prosperous condition.

This church became incorporated April 26, 1904, and new regulations and by-laws adopted.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCHES

A Universalist Church—the second in the state—was erected by Joseph Lufkin and Solomon Dennison, between Mast Landing and Freeport village, and dedicated by Rev. Hosea Ballou in 1811. It was occupied by Rev. Thomas Barnes, who had formerly preached here, Rev. Jabez Woodman, and Rev. Russell Streeter. This building was taken down and removed to the village and was burned in 1832. Another house was erected, which was located on Main street on the lot opposite the residence of Dr. Hyde. The building was burned in 1861, after which the organization ceased to exist.

The Second Universalist Church was organized on the 10th of January, 1884, in the Methodist meeting-house. They at once purchased this building, paying $1000 for the property. In 1885 the society united with the Brunswick parish. Rev. Mr. Crowsley was the first pastor under this new arrangement. In 1887, the church edifice, which had not been completed, was enlarged and finished. In Nov., 1889, Rev. C. M. Waite became pastor. Rev. Mr. Perkins, of New Gloucester, preached here for a short time after the resignation of Mr. Waite. Rev. H. S. Whitman, was the next pastor, serving up to April, 1903, since which time the society has been without a pastor.

Freeport is one of the few towns in the State of Maine where there is not located an active branch of the Methodist Episcopal Church. There was during the seventies a society of this faith which erected the meeting house now occupied by the Universalists. We believe the society was dissolved after disposition was made of the property.

SCHOOL ITEMS

The early schools of Freeport, like those of other Maine towns, were established under the most difficult circumstances, but were nevertheless established upon a basis that has developed one of the best-working school systems in the state.

We cannot do better than to cast a glance toward the typical common school as known in Maine in the early days. Even as soon as our forefathers, almost always Puritanical extraction, had located themselves in the forests of the Pine Tree State and begun their efforts of erecting churches, they made provision for the common schools. They in common with us of today, considered education the bulwark of our institutions, the institutions for the establishment of which they had fought and bled. They knew, therefore, better than we, how much depended upon the proper guidance of the newly established government. They saw their liberties and prosperity wrapped up in the new government which Washington had said was "one today and thirteen tomorrow." Is it a strange thing that these men who so well understood the significance of these trying years, should so thoroughly grasp at the thought that in the education of the masses lay their only hope of ultimate success? No, they saw well their duty, and as pioneers prepared to meet it. A room in the little log cabin became the university of the wilderness, and, humble as were the first efforts, mighty results came from them. From out of these rough, low-roofed structures walked men who were yet to meet the representatives of the courts of Europe, in the battlefield, in diplomacy, and in scores of other capacities from which they emerged unscathed. This system went on until it became almost a necessary thing for a man to reach the president's chair that he be able to present a career begun in the "little red schoolhouse" in the back-woods hamlet. It was not that the people loved wealth and culture less, but that they loved the more the homely virtues inspired by the healthy atmosphere of the country. As we look back today over the progress of our school system, we dwell with pride upon the record it has made. But this system, like all others, was expected to advance, and it was advanced. The town of Freeport has, in common with other towns, reared the homely structures on the hillsides and at the cross roads, hired male teachers at $10 to $15 a month, and female teachers at 75 cents to $1.50 a week and this with the "board round" provision.

The first schoolhouse of which we have any record, was built on Capt. Roger Edwards' lot (No. 38) in South Freeport, in 1736. At the organization of the town, the inhabitants of each district were ordered to meet and choose a school-master. £100 were appropriated for schools in 1794. Rev. Alfred Johnson's salary was increased in 1795, and he taught a grammar school as a part of his ministerial duty.

We learn from the first printed report of the school committee, that in 1863 there were 18 school districts in town, two of which—Nos. 5 and 15—had both a primary and a “high school;” but it is supposed the high school was a grade similar to the present-day grammar school. There were then 977 pupils in town. Two terms were held during the year in most of the districts. In the year 1874, the school-district system in town was abolished, and the schools placed under the care of a supervisor. This was one of the first towns in the state to take this advanced step in school management, which has since been adopted throughout the entire state.

The South Freeport school building was erected 36 years ago. This is a graded school, grammar and primary, and has a combined attendance of about seventy pupils. The names of the schools throughout the town are: the high school, north grammar, intermediate, and Grove street and Maple Ave. primaries, at the village; the south grammar and primary, at South Freeport; and the Burr, Central, Collins, Gore, Litchfield, Mast Landing, Pleasant Hill, Porter’s Landing, and Wolf’s Neck schools, located throughout the country section. These schools have a combined attendance of around 450. There were 608 pupils in town April 1, 1903. The schools are doing very good work and rapid advancement is being made.

The High School was established in 1873, when a special law of the State Legislature extended aid to such towns as would make special appropriations for these institutions. $500 was raised for the purpose in 1873, when Samuel A. Holbrook laid out a public square for the town, upon which the town house was moved, and a high school building erected by Rev. John J. Bulfinch, N. O. True, and Samuel A.

Holbrook, manager. $30,000, obtained as a surplus on the settlement of the war debt of 1861--65, and $10,000 furnished by subscription, were appropriated to build the school house.

William A. Deering was the first principal, being assisted by Nellie Koopman. There were 94 students enrolled during the first term. The town appropriation was soon increased to $1000 and now the amount appropriated annually by the town is $1,500, which amount is increased by $250 received from the state, and a smaller sum received for tuition from surrounding towns. The graduating class of 1903 numbered sixteen, mostly from the English course. The same board of instruction, which proved their efficiency last year, has been retained for the present school year, 1904--5. The board consists of Prof. I. C. Foss, principal; Grace L. Dolly and Eva L. Hersey, assistants. The usual attendance is about seventy.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY

Harriseeket Grange, No. 9, as its number shows, was the ninth local organization in the state of this order which has now so completely covered the state.

This grange was organized in the northern part of the town in 1873-4. Its membership at one time reached as high as 140. The organization operated a "Grange Store" which was under the charge of Geo. Jordan, and was located in what was then a new store, at North Freeport. In 1879 the charter was surrendered, and the order dis-organized.

On March 9, 1901, Ansel Holway, of Skowhegan, re-organized the grange, under the old charter. The organization was made and the first meeting held in the Grand Army Hall. There were 19 charter members. In the following May the place of meeting was changed to the K. of P. Hall on Main street, where the meetings are now held. The first master was George Carney. The second master, John T. Griffin, was the first overseer; he was master for two years when he was appointed district state deputy for Cumberland County. The present board of officers is: Master, Richard Cox, who was overseer for two years previous to this year; overseer, E. T. Bowker; lecturer, Mrs. David Townsend; steward, Fred Brown; asst. steward, Herrick Davis; chaplain, Mrs. Sarah J. Beck; treasurer, David Townsend; secretary, Mrs. Ralph Merrill; gate keeper, Ralph Merrill; cerea, Mrs. Richard Cox; pomona, Mrs. E. T. Bowker; flora, Mrs. Martha Peacock; lady asst. Steward, Miss May Bowker. The present membership is 160.

FREEPORT FAIR

The first annual fair and exhibition of the Freeport Park Association was held in the fall of 1895. The event of this gathering has become one of general interest and importance to the surrounding community, as well as to the citizens of this town. The annual exhibit and horse trot, held on the grounds north of the village, consists of a display of the farm products—fruit, vegetables and live stock—attractive productions of household manufacture and art, and horse racing, together with the usual attendant attractions. Premiums are given to those producing the finest or largest specimens. The Association officers for 1904 are: Pres., Harry Merrill; Vice Pres., George Miller; Sec., Benj. Coffin; Treas., John Lunt; directors: H. Merrill, S. H. Fitts, John Lunt, H. L. Coffin, G. P. Coffin, Ralph Merrill, E. F. Morton, Benj. Coffin and Geo. Miller; Marshall, H. L. Coffin.

POINTS OF INTEREST

CASCO CASTLE

This picturesque new hotel with accommodations for one hundred guests, was opened to the public in June, 1903. It is situated on a high bluff one hundred feet above sea level, just south of South Freeport village. It is only 300 feet from the water's edge, and overlooks the beautiful Casco Bay; whose waters surround it on three sides. The grounds of this hotel contain fifty acres on the seashore. A steel suspension bridge 300 feet long, and 70 feet above the water, connects the main land with the castle grounds. From the top of the stone tower, 102 feet high, a magnificent panorama of seashore and landscape spreads out in all directions. On a clear day the White Mountains are distinctly visible.

This beautiful new summer hotel is the property of the Portland and Brunswick Electric Railroad Company, but is operated by James A. Fuller. Its architecture is that of an ancient Celtic castle of the middle ages, combining beauty and grandeur in its style. It is provided with electric lights and an efficient water system. On its grounds are several enclosures where are kept buffalo, wolves or deer, while those in the immediate vicinity of the hotel are made beautiful by a noted landscape gardener.

This has become one of the most popular summer hotels in the state and is sure to produce salutary results upon the little hamlet of South Freeport.

LOCAL HAMLETS

MAST LANDING—At the head of tide on Harraseeket River was so named from being the landing where masts were delivered from the surrounding forests to the British navy. Abner Dennison settled here as early as 1656. Joseph Lufkin, from Cape Ann, Mass., built his cabin near the bridge, about 1778. Aaron Lufkin and John Griffin, fishermen, and Martin Anderson, were among the first to locate permanently at this point. Zebulon Lufkin joined the others at the close of the war.

PORTER'S LANDING—At the head of the west branch, the home of Capt. Joseph and Benjamin Porter, —formerly known as Mitchell's Landing—was the landing for Freeport, a mile and a half distant. At this place Mr. Porter, in 1793, operated salt-works for the evaporation of sea-water. A hundred yards above the old wharf, near the bridge, there was a tide mill for many years previous to 1820. A road twenty rods wide was laid out through this village, and passing Freeport village, in 1770. This is now a hamlet of about twenty-five houses, mostly built during the days of shipbuilding activity.

OLD OR NOTED LANDMARKS

The old Rogers house on Flying Point, now occupied by Mr. Bueley, is one of the oldest, if not the very oldest house now standing in town.

The house built by Mr. Winthrop, on the Lisbon Falls road, one and one-half miles from the village, now known as the Shaw house, the old Philbrook house, one mile from the Shaw house toward Brunswick, and the Sylvester house on Sylvester Hill, are among the oldest houses in town.

The old Townsend house, the last house in Freeport on the Brunswick road, was built in 1820, by William Jordan.

The old Nye Homestead, in the village on the north side of Main street, is an old landmark.

The old Hyde homestead on Main street, was the home of Dr. John A. Hyde, and of his son, Dr. E. A. Hyde; this was probably built about 1800.

The old Codman Tavern is the most noted house in town. This house was very popular in the old days when travel was by stage coaches from Augusta to Boston, being the favorite stopping place on this part of the route. It was in this house that the commissioners signed the documents which made Maine a separate state. The commissioners were appointed by the General Court of Massachusetts, and signed the act on the thirteenth of March, 1820. The old Holbrook Tavern, opened in 1824, was another very important point during the first half of the last century.

There are many other notable houses in town, giving to the village the appearance of retired prosperity, which, together with the stately and thick-growing elms, lend to the place a peculiar colonial air shared only by the earliest towns of New England.

Census, 1904

The population of the town of Freeport has been arranged in families where that arrangement has been possible. In these families, in addition to the resident living members, the names of the non-resident members are included. It should be borne in mind that this plan does not include the names of all former residents of this town, as the names of the non-residents appear only when one or both the parents are still living in the town. After the name of each non-resident will be found the present address, when such address has been given to us. The non-residents are indicated by the (*).

In case a daughter in a family has married, her name taken in marriage will appear after her given name in parenthesis (), preceded by a small (m).

Following the names of the population is the occupation. To designate the occupations we have used the more common abbreviations and contractions. Some of these follow: Farmer—far; carpenter—car; railroad service—R R ser; student, a member of an advanced institution of learning—stu; pupil, a member of a lower grade of schools—pl; housework—ho; laborer—lab; physician and surgeon—phy & sur; clergyman—clerg; merchant—mer; teacher—tr; blacksmith—blk; clerk—cl; book-keeper—bk kpr; lawyer—law; mechanic—mech; engineer—eng; insurance—ins; maker—mkr; worker—wkr; work—wk; shoe shop work—s s work; fisherman—fish; mariner—mar; poultry—plt; mill operative—mill op; electrician—elec; painter—ptr; carriage work—car wk; potato business—pot bus; dress maker—dr mkr; traveling salesman—sales.

This Census was taken expressly for this work during the fall of 1904, by E. M. and A. I. Campbell, Kent's Hill, Me.
